

RBA Appears Unfazed

- At the RBA's September board meeting today, the RBA left the cash rate unchanged at 2.0%, as expected. The broad message of the Statement was also similar - that the RBA will continue to assess economic and financial conditions suggesting that rates will be on hold for some time.
- The few changes to the RBA's accompanying statement were mostly on global conditions. However, they were very subtle and did not suggest much alarm on behalf of the RBA. It suggests the RBA is little fazed by the extreme movements in financial markets globally and concerns over China in recent weeks.
- More insight could be revealed in the minutes which will be released in two weeks.
- We continue to expect the RBA to keep rates on hold until late 2016. The domestic economy continues to undergo a difficult transition from mining investment to growth driven by other sectors of the economy. Nonetheless, there are tentative signs of improvement. Further, interest rates are already at very low levels, and the lower Australian dollar is providing support.

At the RBA's September board meeting today, the RBA left the cash rate unchanged at 2.0%. With the decision widely expected, the focus was on the commentary surrounding the decision.

The broad message of the Statement was also similar - that the RBA will continue to assess economic and financial conditions suggesting that rates will be on hold for sometime.

The few changes to the RBA's accompanying statement were mostly on global conditions and were very subtle. This could suggest the RBA is little fazed by the extreme movements in financial markets globally and concerns over China in recent weeks.

There was a note on the recent volatility in share markets, but only in passing. This is not too surprising as measured response is typical of central banks, as sentiment can change quickly.

Similarly, on the global economy and the outlook for China, the RBA recognised "some further softening in conditions in China and east Asia of late", but added that US growth was stronger.

There was a hint that the RBA had downgraded its assessment to the global growth outlook and the demand for commodity prices. Previously, the RBA noted that "much of this trend (of lower commodity prices) appears to reflect increased supply", whereas the RBA now states that "key commodity prices are much lower than a year ago in part reflecting increased supply". This could reflect some recognition that demand factors are playing a greater role in pushing down commodity prices.

On the domestic economy, the RBA's assessment was broadly unchanged and noted that the "moderate expansion" in the economy is continuing. The RBA reiterated that employment growth had been stronger, but that spare capacity remained and that monetary policy needed to be accommodative.

Similarly, on the Australian dollar, the RBA reiterated that it was “adjusting to the significant declines in key commodity prices”.

Outlook for Monetary Policy

The RBA has signalled it remains in a “wait and see” stance despite recent developments in global financial markets. While the RBA’s assessment signals some recognition of concerns regarding China, volatility in equity markets and possibly weaker demand for commodities, it does not appear overly alarmed by these events.

Given the uncertainty regarding the outlook for China and developments in financial markets, this approach would seem wise. More insight could be revealed in the minutes which will be released in two weeks.

The domestic economy continues to undergo a difficult transition from mining investment to growth driven by other sectors of the economy. Nonetheless, there are tentative signs of improvement. Further, interest rates are already at very low levels, and the lower Australian dollar is providing support. We continue to expect the RBA to keep rates on hold until late 2016.

The one page text of the Governor’s Statement can be found at <http://www.rba.gov.au/>

Janu Chan, Senior Economist
Ph: 02-8253-0898

Contact Listing

Chief Economist

Hans Kunnen

kunnenh@bankofmelbourne.com.au

(02) 8254 8322

Senior Economist

Josephine Horton

hortonj@bankofmelbourne.com.au

(02) 8253 6696

Senior Economist

Janu Chan

chanj@bankofmelbourne.com.au

(02) 8253 0898

The information contained in this report ("the Information") is provided for, and is only to be used by, persons in Australia. The information may not comply with the laws of another jurisdiction. The Information is general in nature and does not take into account the particular investment objectives or financial situation of any potential reader. It does not constitute, and should not be relied on as, financial or investment advice or recommendations (expressed or implied) and is not an invitation to take up securities or other financial products or services. No decision should be made on the basis of the Information without first seeking expert financial advice. For persons with whom Bank of Melbourne has a contract to supply Information, the supply of the Information is made under that contract and Bank of Melbourne's agreed terms of supply apply. Bank of Melbourne does not represent or guarantee that the Information is accurate or free from errors or omissions and Bank of Melbourne disclaims any duty of care in relation to the Information and liability for any reliance on investment decisions made using the Information. The Information is subject to change. Terms, conditions and any fees apply to Bank of Melbourne products and details are available. Bank of Melbourne or its officers, agents or employees (including persons involved in preparation of the Information) may have financial interests in the markets discussed in the Information. Bank of Melbourne owns copyright in the information unless otherwise indicated. The Information should not be reproduced, distributed, linked or transmitted without the written consent of BankofMelbourne. Any unauthorized use or dissemination is prohibited. Neither Bank of Melbourne- A Division of Westpac Banking Corporation ABN 33 007. If you no longer wish to receive this information, please reply to this email with the word "Unsubscribe" in the subject heading along with your full name and company name.